Case Western Reserve University
Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A., October 25-30, 2010

The 2010 International Peace and War Summit will bring together scholars from many nations and disciplines, including military ethicists and those who work in peace studies or conflict resolution. These scholars will be joined by veterans and currently serving military personnel, as well as a broad cross-section of practitioners, including psychologists and psychiatrists, doctors, nurses, lawyers, engineers, business men and women, elected officials, civil servants, non-profit sector workers and more. Seven panel discussions will take place throughout the week of the Summit, on a broad array of topics relating to peace and war (please see schedule, below). The themes of peace and war will also be explored through the arts. The Summit will feature a poetry reading, a play, two musical performances, a film screening, and two art exhibits.
